General

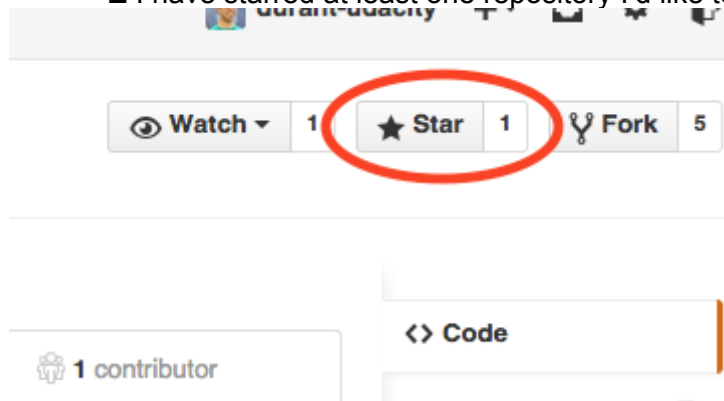

- ☐ I've uploaded at least four projects to GitHub.
- ☐ I've verified that my account shows knowledge about how to make incremental commits.
- ☐ U For the last two weeks, I've made and pushed some sort of commit, no matter how small, to repo(s) each day.
- ☐ U I have more than 2 projects on GitHub, indicating that I have uploaded more projects than required.
- ☐ U I've contributed to an open source project.

Personal Profile

- ☐ I have a professional GitHub name. If at all possible this GitHub name is my own name.
- ☐ I have a professional profile photo (recommended to be a photo of yourself, but could also be stylized).
- ☐ My profile is up to date.
- ☐ Profile includes at least one up-to-date links for: 'URL' and/or 'Company' fields and/or 'Contact Email' and current location.

Projects

- ☐ I have starred at least one repository I'd like to keep track of.

- ☐ My projects have meaningful names.
- ☐ My projects have a completed README that says what the purpose of the project is, any instructions about how to use or view it, and what kind of collaboration is sought.
Not all forked repos/changes require modifications to the README, especially when contributing upstream to another's project (would need to be a substantial change). All changes should be documented with commit messages to explain the changes.

☐ The last commit I made to a project matched the commit style guide I chose. If I did not follow the Udacity git commit style guide, then I have included a link to the guide I did use to show consistency.
